

COLOUR THE RIGHT WAY

The need to look good is part of every woman's nature. It is psychologically proven that women feel better about themselves when they wear make up. But ask yourselves, are you doing it the right way? Most women tend to think that all colours suit them. That's where the big mistake is.

Makeup portrays different moods on your face. Studies have shown that men tend to see woman who wear pink lipstick as gentle while woman who wear bright red lipstick as arrogant. As often as not, this is not the case.

Always pick your shades accordingly! We all know that fashion has always played a role in the kind of colours we like. Brown and pink blends are light and sheer in texture and it allows the skin tone to come through. Selecting makeup colours and picking the right shade can be the hardest of makeup purchase.

Grey eye shadow tend to give a darker skin tone, it may also create a heavy lidded effect on your eyes for those with tired eyes. Green and purple eye shadow is more flattering for older skins and brightens their eyes as well. DO try to match your makeup with your clothes. Peach makeup definitely won't match a burgundy outfit and bright red lipstick wont match an orange outfit.

The most important thing is DON'T put too many colours on your face at the same time. You would not want to look like a circus clown!

With different shades now available, the buyer is likely to be confused over the colours. DO match your foundation to your skin tone. DO be aware that not every colour suits everyone. No matter how good it looks in the package, it can tell a different story on your face.

Besides knowing how to paint your face with the right colours, make sure you have the tools of your trade. Quality brushes and applicators and a little bit of practice will let just about any makeup user to achieve better-looking results. Using the right tools will produce a fine result on your face and also allow the make up to last longer.

Firstly you need a quality pressed face powder to keep makeup looking fresh when you are on the go. Then you need your skin tone foundation to create a smooth base. You can use eyeliner to add definition to your eye. Not to forget your eye shadow brush to apply eye colour, brow and lash comb to remove clumpy mascara by combing through the lashes after every coat of mascara. Then you need the blusher brush to blend the colour powder around you cheek area. It can also be used to dust off excess powder from your face.

Last but not the least, the most popular item of makeup, the lipstick. Pick one not only for colour and price but for its durability, texture and protective benefits it can have on your lips.
